

Drug Trade and Foreign Policy

The United States and Mexico are interdependent economically and socially. However, drug cartels have become a powerful part of Mexican culture over the past decade. This has affected the foreign policies, immigration, and tourism between our two countries.

Is it in the United States' (and your) interest for our government to become more involved in Mexico's war on drug cartels?
What role does technology play in this war?

Make recommendations to the U.S. State Department as well as to the American citizenry. Include graphic data analysis and representation as part of your presentation (don't you dare copy and paste).

Present February 28th.

2666, Bolano (excerpts)
News of a Kidnapping, Garcia Marquez
I Am a Taxi, Deborah Ellis

Language Arts

Reading
Writing
Speaking and Listening

Science

Geography
Technology in science

Social Studies

US Constitution
Democracy
Economics
US Foreign Policy
Drug Legislation